Hi John,

We appreciate the response and agree that [REDACTED] should not attend school until his Doctor confirms he is fit for normal activities. We were originally under the impression that the ERB testing was required so we have been trying to accommodate his attendance but our appointment today has made this more concerning...

With that being said, I left a voicemail message for you today as well. There are now additional circumstances of this incident that need to be resolved. Can you please call me at [REDACTED] to discuss?

Thank you.

Rick and Cassie,

I have followed up with the MS since our meeting and observed [REDACTED] during the breaks the last two days.

Today, Ms. Weeks and I were holding the doors after testing for everyone to return to the building after an extending break of 30 minutes where [REDACTED] participated. On the way in, I make eye contact and gave him a thumbs up to subtly get feedback on if he was doing well. [REDACTED] noticed me and acknowledged the gesture. Then, for the second day, he departed campus after testing and after the break.

[REDACTED] should remain at home until he is cleared by a doctor to return to school safely and full-time. There is no reason to be concerned or prioritize the ERB testing. Given the attached note, it is unclear exactly how to accommodate in the way the CPNP has noted. We have a medical leave policy, and if that is needed, we can work with [REDACTED] and your family while he remains at home and/or under medical care to recover. I have worked with many families over the years with students who needed to remain away from school for health-related issues. The situations like I have worked with are unfortunate but not uncommon.

Please communicate directly with Mrs. Walters and Nurse Gold, and they will inform faculty members and create plans as needed.

Please also acknowledge that you have received this message. Given the ongoing medical concerns for [REDACTED] we will require a clearance from the doctor to return to school full-time.

I look forward to welcoming [REDACTED] back to O'Neal when he is able.

Sincerely,

John

We took [REDACTED] to Sandhills Pediatrics today for a follow-up from the assault that occurred last Monday. Please review the attached note from his Doctor as it relates to his ability to continue school for the remainder of the week and let us know how this will be accommodated.

Regards,

Rick and Cassie Stefanik
